

That was an amusing column. Helman Morin of the Associated Press wrote at the bottom of yesterday's front page, pinch-hitting for Hal Boyle who's out West visiting the Sioux Indians and keeping a sharp eye on what hair he has left.

Morin's text was the declaration of an upstate New York mayor that there ought to be intelligence tests for newspaper reporters, and a newspaper should be prohibited by law from hiring anyone who couldn't pass the examination.

Morin had a lot of fun sorting out old corn, discussing the various kinds of intelligence tests he himself couldn't pass, and reviving the ancient argument about who is dumber—the reporter who writes the copy or the editor who corrects and revises and headlines it.

But I was thinking, while pursuing Morin's jocular piece, about the elusive nature of censorship and the unanswerable question it propounds: If the press is to be patrolled and supervised who shall be the judge of these things?

Government is a creature of law, and therefore it is fitting and proper that law associations and government itself shall supervise and examine and license those who propose to be lawyers.

But the press is technically a private citizen, subject to no more restraint than any other private citizen, and its main duty is to report what is going on in government and express opinions about the same. Would you expect a government—any government—to freely license those who report on and criticize the people in government?

It won't work. Either you have elective government and a divorced and free press, or you have censorship—in which case elective government virtually disappears and the politicians perpetuate themselves and their friends in high places.

On the humorous side of Mr. Morin's article yesterday, you have the prospect of politicians quizzing reporters instead of reporters quizzing politicians—under the fanciful plan of submitting the press to intelligence tests.

But on the serious side it would mean censorship. And clothing government with censorship power is a menacing thought. Freedom fought English kings to overcome it and set up democratic government. Freedom went to sleep in Argentina—this year—and have lost both their newspapers and the control of their government.

Must See Bookie Take Bet Before Making Arrest

Little Rock, Aug. 7.—(AP)—A county coroner can arrest a bookmaker, but only if he sees a violation of law, says the Arkansas attorney general's office.

Assistant Atty. Gen. Cleveland Holland issued that opinion yesterday in answer to a query by Dr. Allyn R. Power, Garland county coroner.

Dr. Power, who had asked the opinion so he could "fully live up to the oath of office," had no comment on the decision last night. He indicated that he might make a statement after receiving official notice of the opinion.

Holland said the coroner's primary duty is the holding of inquests. In addition, he is empowered to require bonds from persons for appearance in Circuit court but only "for offenses committed within his (the coroner's) presence," Holland wrote.

"You will observe that under this section he does not have the general powers of a peace officer," Holland added, if the coroner sees a person violating the gambling statute, he would be authorized to require them to post bond for appearance before the next term of Circuit court.

New York, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Despite encouragement offered by rails, the stock market today dipped lower.

Losses never were very large, only a few cents to a little more than a dollar a share. But gains were smaller than that and not nearly so frequent.

The rails were barely ahead. Nickel Plate added a full dollar and tipped the scales to the upside against the carriers posting small losses or trading unchanged.

30 Millions for School Buildings

Little Rock, Aug. 7 (AP)—The Arkansas education department reported today that Arkansas school districts have spent nearly $30,000,000 for school buildings and equipment in the last three years.

The department said that about 2,000 new class rooms are included. It said that 135 physical education buildings and auditoriums, 48 home economics buildings and 41 agriculture buildings have been completed. Sixty-five school lunch rooms, 25 teacherages and 45 miscellaneous structures have been finished and ready for use. Twelve new school sites have been purchased.

The compilation was contained in the fifth of a series of weekly news releases which the department started issuing last month.

The report said also that districts own a total of 2,800 buses, which transport 170,000 pupils, or more than one-third the student population, each school day.

The department said bonded indebtedness had just about doubled, to a total of more than $57,000,000, and that total debts probably would exceed $60,000,000 by Oct. 1.

Six reasons were listed for the expansion and the increase in indebtedness:

1. Initiated Act No. 1 of 1948, the school consolidation act, which, among other things, required for the first time that a high school be available to every pupil.

2. A amendment No. 40, also passed at the November, 1948, general election, which removed the 18-mill ceiling on taxes which could be voted for school purposes.

3. Act 161 of 1949, which raised from 10 to 15 per cent of assessed tax valuation the maximum allowable bonded indebtedness of any district.

4. Improvement of Negro facilities. The report commented that "court decisions and other pressures and a new awareness of the problems of Negro children have caused a great effort to improve facilities for Negro youth."

5. A previous slowdown in normal building as a result of World War II.

6. "Desire on the part of the people for better school facilities."

Nashville Paper Tells of Drowning

The following account of the drowning of Clyde Williams of Texarkana in Narrows lake is from Monday's Nashville News:

McWilliams drowned late Saturday afternoon when a small fishing boat capsized in 55-foot water near the Chimney Rock area on the north portion of the lake. According to unofficial statements, McWilliams with two other fishermen were riding their boat in the wake of a large cruiser. Both were bound for the dock to fry fish the whole party had caught.

Suddenly the small boat nosed up and turned slowly over, spilling the three fishermen into the lake. Bill Corley of Texarkana, owner of the cruiser, said preservers and float cushions were thrown to the three occupants.

One preserver landed within two feet of McWilliams but for some unexplained reason the victim made no grab for the preserver but sank under the water, apparently without a struggle.

The small boat was reported to be 100 yards in back of the cruiser and safely out of its wake when the freak accident occurred.

H. D. Smith, Hope, Injured in Auto Accident on 67

Texarkana — H. D. Smith, 66, of Route 3, Hope, was taken to St. Michael's Hospital for examination and possible treatment following an auto accident on Highway 67 near Paul Spur, at approximately 7:15 p. m. Monday.

He was taken to the hospital by an East Funeral Home ambulance. Ambulance attendants said that the man did not appear to have any broken bones.

Investigating officer W. H. Scott, of the Miller County sheriff's office said Smith was driving a truck which was struck by an auto driven by Phil Smith, 29, negro, of Forrest City, Ark.

A sheriff's office spokesman said the Negro had been booked for reckless driving, and that formal charges probably would be filed Tuesday.

100-Degree Temperatures to Continue

Little Rock, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Another round of 100-degree weather is in store for some sections of Arkansas today.

The mercury reached 103 degrees at Fort Smith yesterday. That was the year's record high in the state. The previous top was 101 degrees in north Arkansas last month.

There was a note of encouragement from the U. S. Weather Bureau here, though. Last night the weatherman said today's temperatures probably would be higher than they were yesterday.

But a forecaster said today that a band of cloudy skies moved into the state today and probably would keep the temperatures at about yesterday's levels.

There is a possibility that some sections in north Arkansas will get rain.

The mercury also jumped above the 100-degree mark at Texarkana yesterday. It was 102 there other high readings:

Dardanelle 101 degrees; Arkadelphia, Hot Springs, Searcy, Nashville and Ozark 100; Camden, El Dorado and Gilbert 99; Little Rock 97; Pine Bluff 96; Wilson 95 and Walnut Ridge and Fayetteville 94.

You Gussed It—Monday Was 101, Hottest of Year

Monday was the hottest day of 1951.

The official high temperature reading at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station was 101 degrees, an the low 72.

The heat of yesterday's day-light hours continued into last night causing the first sleepless night of the season for many citizens.

The temperature moderated today under cloudy skies which promised summer showers.

Korea Lessons Applied in Guard Camp

Camp Polk, La., Aug. 7.—(AP)—The 39th (Louisiana-Arkansas) national guard division is being taught lessons the United States learned in Korea.

The division, which began its two-week summer encampment here yesterday, is under the command of Brig. Gen. Charles A. Redding of Shreveport, La. Redding, the assistant commander, is in charge in the absence of Maj. Gen. Raymond Fleming, who is acting chief of the national guard bureau in Washington.

Gen. Redding said: "We are applying the latest tactical lessons learned in Korea. Realism will be the keynote. We are working closely with the air force in air-ground support tactics."

"Our units will engage in field exercises in which an aggressor force will be employed. The same infiltration tactics which harassed our rear echelon in Korea will be used by the aggressors in attempting to infiltrate our line here."

Negotiator Arrives in Iran

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Britain's chief oil negotiator, Richard Stokes, flew to Abadan today to inspect personally conditions at the shut down refinery.

President Truman's trouble shooter, W. Averell Harriman, followed in another plane which landed at Abadan eight minutes later.

The British had demanded assurances that Iran would refrain from petty annoyances against British employees at Abadan—site of the world's largest refinery—before opening talks.

Mossa sarabandy, governor general of the oil-producing province of Khuzistan, greeted the visitors at Abadan airport as guests of the Iranian government.

Meanwhile, talks over nationalization of the Anglo-Iranian oil company's vast properties—the Abadan refinery is the most valuable—continued in Tehran.

Donald Ferguson, one of Stoke's team, met in the Iranian capital with the Iranian nationalization committee to present what he called "cold facts."

Ferguson is one of the British government's crack nationalization experts and worked out many of the details involved when Britain took over her own iron and steel industry.

Anti-Truman Spirit Lights Mississippi

By United Press

Mississippi highlighted a summertime flurry of elections in Dixie today by staging an anti-Truman Democratic primary which may produce a new leader in the South's fight for states' rights.

All eight of the candidates for governor, largest field in the history of the state, were united in their opposition to the present administration. They also were unanimously pledged to uphold the principle of segregation in Mississippi schools.

This unusual harmony, with not a peep being heard from the pro-Truman reaction, but prohibition at the top of the list of issues an expected 350,000 voters will settle in hot but fair weather.

Georgia and Virginia also were holding statewide elections today on the heels of a primary in Kentucky.

Results of Kentucky's balloting Saturday gave the Republican nomination for governor to Eugene Siler of Williamsburg. His opponent, former U. S. Rep. W. Flowers Mead of Prestonsburg conceded last night.

In the democratic voting, Howell W. Vincent, Covington attorney conceded the gubernatorial nomination to the incumbent, Lawrence Wetherby. Wetherby rang up a possible record-breaking majority of about 122,000 votes, some 25,000 more than the majority Vice President Alben W. Barkley received in the 1948 senatorial campaign.

Whoever wins the Democratic or in the runoff primary that may nomination in Mississippi today, or in the runoff primary that may be necessary, will win the governorship since there is no GOP opposition. He will then automatically become head of the state delegation to the Democratic national convention.

Retiring Gov. Fielding Wright, holding that position in 1948, led the civil rights revolt which resulted in the formation of the states' rights ticket. His successor probably will be just as stoutly opposed to any such program.

In addition to balloting in the governor's race, Mississippi voters will choose a lieutenant governor, elect an entire new legislature, and fill numerous state, district and county officers. Candidates were split on the principal question of whether liquor sales should be permitted in the now dry state.

Georgia was forced to go through the formality of statewide balloting in order to elect three solicitors general who now hold office by appointment and who are unopposed.

Virginia is filling 51 seats in the general assembly with voting expected to be listless and light. Gov. John S. Battle's administration seemed in no danger of losing its control. The hottest fight was in Princess Anne county where a judge impounded 250 mail ballots on evidence of irregularities.

Asked about the letter, Senator Kem (R-Mo) declared "I cannot think that anyone who tries to get political advantage out of human misery will gain anything in the end."

Senator Schoeppel (R-Kas) said he hoped no one was going to play politics with a great disaster.

Humphrey, long an advocate of the proposal for a Missouri valley authority to control floods could be assured only through election of more "forward" looking liberal-minded members of congress from the midwest.

Ridgway in Ultimatum to Reds

By OLEN CLEMENTS

Tokyo, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway told the Reds today Korean cease-fire talks will not be resumed until they assure him they will keep their Kaesong neutrality agreement.

The allied supreme commander bluntly acknowledged the Red apology for last Saturday's violation of the neutral zone. Then he told them that wasn't enough.

In a strong-worded message to the two Red commanders in Korea, Ridgway said he needed new assurances that communists will keep their word.

Only then, he said, will he send his five negotiators back to Kaesong to resume armistice negotiations.

Ridgway, who has twice broken off talks because armed Red troops violated the neutral area said he didn't think the appearance of a company of heavily armed communists last Saturday was an "accident," as the Reds stated.

'Gentleman
Robber' Is Captured

Washington, Aug. 7 - A well-dressed young man stepped inside a plush Connecticut avenue apartment. He stammered, "I... I... must have made a mistake." "I sure know you did," retorted Detective William Schilling, planted there to spring a trap on the capital's "celluloid" robber. Police identified the young man as Kenneth C. Von Der Heide, 31. Inspector Robert V. Murray said he talked freely about three years of fast and easy house breaking which netted him jewelry, silver, furs and cash.

He used a piece of celloid to trip the locks on some 250 apartments and hotel rooms, police said. Municipal Court Judge Thomas C. Scalley last night ordered him held under $20,000 bond.

DOROTHY DIX

Biased Grandma

Dear Miss Dix: I have two little girls, aged 6 and 4. My mother-in-law is always buying gifts for the 6-year-old but never gets anything for the younger child. It breaks my heart to see the 4-year-old stand by and watch while her sister looks at her gifts. I never have a cent to call my own so I can't buy things like that. My husband has noticed it too, but is afraid to say anything. I have asked my mother-in-law if she would buy either for both or none, but she still continues this practice.

M. B.

Answer: Your mother-in-law exhibits a spiteful type of favoritism that is one of the lowest human traits, and she is also going out of her way to spoil both children for you.

If this practice is allowed to continue unchecked, the sweet dispositions of the little girls will suffer, and their entire mental attitude may be warped. The older and favored child will regard herself as the queen who can do no wrong, while the younger one will soon feel completely unloved and unwanted.

Husband Should Act
Your husband should definitely step in and have a serious talk with his mother. It's much, much better to hurt her feelings than to hurt his daughter's lives. If he lacks the gumption to take a stand in the matter, you'll have to insist on equal rights for both children. If your girls are of the right temperament, and sensible, you might entice their aid and have the older one refuse her gift unless her sister also shares grandma's beneficence. This is the only way the sisters will grow up to share things, both with them selves and others.

Dear Miss Dix: We are a childless couple, married three years, and very devoted to each other. A year ago I lost a premature baby and have been ill and nervous since. My husband and I both work, and I try to keep going because we need the money. Sometimes, how-perience illness can realize its existence.

Though it's trending on delicate ground to inquire into a family's financial standing, I can't see why you have to work at all. Your husband apparently has a steady job. And even though his income isn't large it should certainly be sufficient to support two young people. The best person to talk to your husband and bring him to a realization of your condition is a doctor. Since you are under the care of a physician, arrange for a talk between the two men and see if friend husband can't be convinced of the facts in the case.

Answer: It's an odd quirk of human nature, and one of the most prevalent, that a well person simply cannot understand ill health. Apparently only one who has experienced illness can realize its existence.

Dear Dorothy Dix: A few weeks ago, my boy friend Dick and I had an argument and broke up. He is 19, and I am a year younger. He hasn't talked to me since, and I have discovered that the argument was all my fault. I want to go back with him how can I get him back?

Answer: A sincere apology is your only recourse. If he won't accept the apology, there's nothing further you can do except bide time. However, since you acknowledge the fault was yours, he is probably nursing a bad case of hurt feelings and will be only too happy to grab a chance at reconciliation.

Egypt Is to Cancel Treaty With Britain

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 7 - (AP) - Egypt has warned Britain that she intends to cancel the Anglo-Egyptian mutual defense treaty by the end of this month. The treaty, which permits Britain to keep troops at the Suez canal, has been a sore spot between the two countries since the end of World War II.

Egypt's Foreign Minister, Mohammed Salah Eddin told a cheering parliament Britain had closed the door to further negotiations on the disputed treaty and it would be cancelled before the end of this session of parliament. The August.

Eddin's statement was a formal reply to British foreign secretary Herbert Morrison's charges in the house of commons July 30 that Egypt is taking an "uncompromising" and "irresponsible" attitude toward the major problems in the Middle East.

Since negotiations started in 1946 to renew and revise the treaty, Egypt has demanded that Britain withdraw her troops from the vital Suez—main supply route during World War II. Egypt also wants to incorporate the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan under King Farouk's rule. Britain has declared world tensions—and particularly those in the Middle East—make it necessary that she keep her troops in the Suez to protect Egypt's as well as Britain's interests. She also opposes turning the Sudan over to Egypt.

Egypt served formal notice last November that the treaty was no longer regarded as legal. Britain stopped exporting the hope that Britain would meet her demands. (Although British troops are stationed at the vital shipping link between Europe and the East, Egypt has full control over shipping through the Suez. Supporting the Arab blockade of Israel, she has imposed rigid restrictions on shipping and has stopped several ships carrying goods to the Jewish State. The U. S., France and Britain yesterday served notice that they would introduce a resolution at the U. N. security council demanding that Egypt lift the blockade.)

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1935
By King Features Syndicate.

New York, Aug. 7 - The clerical furor over the impudence of that mighty parasite, the mis-called system of public education, is a public boom even though the cacklers temporarily retain their old advantage. This advantage is there because they are dealing with a public which never was taught to define terms and examine ideas, but was just taught terms and ideas and gulped them.
The racket was in charge of this teaching and served its own interests in the process.

Being uneducated themselves in any respectable meaning of the term, the teachers of the system took to collective bargaining as though this had been established as the last word in relations between worker and boss and without the slightest knowledge of the inherent inequities of unionism.
Organized into the "educational union" they are a mighty force for evil but helpless within their racket, like miners in the U.M.W.
Actually, they are moved by a dumb, ignoble desire for economic security on pensions from the state and can not see for themselves that if they are to earn the largess of the state they must do the state's dirty work for a term of years at the expense of the children. A teacher who today should have the humility to inform a class of children that belief in democracy is not essential to education and could be rejected without implication of bad character would run a serious risk of dismissal.

Meanwhile, however, the public is beginning to twitch in its torpor for the first time since this monster began to establish a vested right to dictate the moral, intellectual and political character of the nation by misinforming a few generations of children. To lay down a flat platonic-moral law that Democracy is the last word and that no decent person may disparage the shapeless dorma which produced the Roosevelt White House rackets, the riots of the CIO and the A. P. of L. with their incidental slaughters and Harry S. Truman, is to drop an iron curtain and forbid all future political speculation and development.

Democracy would be the last word and the coarse, brutal cynicism of Dave Dubinsky and Oliver Wendell Holmes would be the way of life to be imposed on all men kind by a nation of crusaders who would march forth unable to define it. For there are in current use, even in the racket of education itself, dozens of meaningless versions of "democracy," and others are improvised from the top of the head by drooling bulbheads to suit their monetary moods.

Honry Wallace once made a speech at Madison Square Garden.
In unbecoming fear that Russia would quit the war and make a separate peace with triumphant Hitler, in which he hatched up half a dozen special kinds of "democracy" in Russia, all preferable to ours, and qualified his faith in the American Bill of Rights.
Many elements of the smothering thing which calls itself democracy were contributed by Europeans steeped in tyranny.

The famous Pasadena case in which the people of that American community were abused by the racket and its agents in the New York literary supplements for cleaning up a situation which they found rotten, will do good far beyond the center of the scrap.
The issue brought to focus there was the people's right to dictate to the teachers, as public employees, and to deny them unconditional custody of the mines of their children during the years when the children are taught the beliefs that will control them through life.

The parents of the United States
first organized little neighborhood schools for their own convenience and for the benefit of their children. Some classes were held in cabin homes, but soon little cabin schools were built for the special purpose and teachers were hired to teach only truths when the parents held to be self-evident.
Then the schools developed into off-the-street clubs and, with the adoption of truancy laws the parents lost custody of the kids to boards of education, complete with fly-cops, and a swarm of teachers who included a lot of time-serving battle-axes who took out their envy of married women on the married women's progeny.
Now the teachers had control and through the organized racket of "public education" they were developing power. The state, through the truancy and compulsory attendance laws has now established a vested right to the character of the children with the teachers as custodians. The parents must send them to public schools (barred trifling exceptions) or go to jail themselves for causing them to be delinquent. This is the law even

During this period the monster was developing and now has the audacity to threaten millions of family homes through its power to tax outrageously, and with a first be squandered on follies no more essential to education than stables are essential to sport. The result has been that parent-tax-payers and other tax payers, who oppose outlandish bond issues to gratify the demands of such swaggering enemies of education and Fascists, the label that they stick on all true anti-Fascists.

Yet there is a stirring of in-what they might do about it, many parents have the minimum intelligence necessary to under-the young and put parents into jail for interfering.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT
(For Hugh Fullerton, Jr.)

New York, Aug. 7 - (AP) - If Arthur Mann, who used to be Branch Rickey's assistant and close confidant, has his way, the baseball hearing down in Washington may yet turn into an extremely interesting and lively production.

Arthur has appointed himself a one-man committee to persuade the house inquiry to dig up the transcript of those two memorable sessions at Saratoga and St.
Petersburg in 1947 which resulted in Commissioner Happy Chandler slapping a one-year suspension on Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers.

To that end, he has formally wired the presidents of the two major leagues a request that they ask Chandler to produce the transcript, and he also has strongly recommended to the subcommittee conducting the hearings that it question the ex-commissioner on some aspects of that weird chapter in baseball history.

Mr. X Is New Mystery Man of Baseball

New York, Aug. 7 —(AP)—Who is the 'Mr. X' the club owners refuse to identify as their dark horse candidate for baseball commissioner?

As the 16 big league executives convened today to elect or bet a successor line on their next commissioner, "Mr. X" appeared to be the possible choice over the "big five" in the face of the speculation.

The five are Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the national figure, James A. Farley, the business man, and George Trautman, Ford Frick and Warren Giles, the baseball men.

Others on the slate containing some 30 to 35 names include Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio, Sen. Edwin Johnson (D.) of Colorado, and chief justice of the Supreme Court Fred M. Vinson.

But the identity of "Mr. X" remains a deep, dark secret.

One owner, who didn't want his name mentioned, agreed the big five were out front, he added, however.

But there is one other name highly placed that it would embarrass him if it were to be known.

The general feeling is that no new commissioner will emerge from the meeting. But that was the feeling, made in 1945, when A. B. (Happy) Chandler was elected.

Chandler was the dark horse who won over such candidates as Bill Hannagan, Farley, Frick and Giles.

Whoever he will be, the new commissioner is assured of receiving a higher salary than either of his predecessors, the late Judge Charles Landis and Chandler.

Landis salary was $100,000. Chandler's was $120,000. This latter raised last month after the owners refused to vote him a new term.

The owners' confab was to be preceded by a meeting of the four-man screening committee which was expected to pore down the list to a handful of names.

Davis Cup Rivals Are Ready to Go

Newport, R. I., Aug. 7 —(AP)—Australia's Davis cup defenders found their opponents checked in for their first starts in ancient Newport today.

While Frank Sedgman and co. were enroute here, all of the other favored performers in the 64-man international field survived first-round tests in fairly decisive fashion.

It should be an easy matter, however, for the Australians to advance with yesterday's winners, Sedgman was paired with Cliff Mayne of Berkeley, Calif.

Bob McGregor, with Charles Brundage of Newport, and Mervyn Rose with Bob Edwards of Washington.

Another Australian, Don Candy, not connected with his nation's cup team, was down for another postponed first-rounder with Cap-

Red Probers Don't Follow Through

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Aug. 7 —(AP)—Senator McCarran and his fellow-senators on the judiciary committee have shown much eagerness in digging into communism themselves.

But they have shown a tardiness in putting into motion some other government machinery for working the same field, including an examination of our whole loyalty and security program.

McCarran, a Nevada Democrat but not friendly with President Truman, is chairman of the very important judiciary committee whose members this year created a subcommittee of themselves to look into communism. It's a twin of the house un-American activities committee.

It's working now on possible Communist links in the state department. But last year McCarran was chief sponsor of a measure—called the subversive activities control act—to flush members of the Communist party into the open.

That act called for Mr. Truman to appoint a five-man board to decide whether the Communist party is a Soviet agent. Before the board could operate with full blessing of the law, it had to be approved by the full senate, a step which first needed approval by McCarran's judiciary committee.

Thus McCarran's group had in effect life and death power over any board appointed by the President. Although Mr. Truman appointed the board last October, the judiciary committee kept the board and the program in suspense until last week when it finally approved three of the five board members. The fifth had resigned because of illness.

The government's loyalty and security program—to get rid of disloyal government workers and those who can't be trusted with secrets—has been criticized on two main counts: It wasn't tough enough and it didn't give enough protection to the rights of individuals.

Last January Mr. Truman appointed a commission of prominent men, all outsiders, headed by Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, to examine the whole loyalty-security program to see how it's doing and how it could be done better. This was the best chance the country has had for an impartial study of the whole controversial issue.

There was a slight hitch, which could be cleaned up by McCarran's committee before the commission made up of businessmen and lawyers, could buckle down to work.

The commission members, because of the nature of their work, regularly have dealings with government agencies, like thousands of other American businessmen. They'd draw some pay from the government for their work on the commission. But this wouldn't be fulltime. And meanwhile they'd draw some pay from the government for their work on the commission.

But there's a law, called the "conflict of interest" law, which forbids anyone to draw government pay while doing business with the government or representing it.

William Holden in Vain Rescue

North Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 7 —(AP)—Actor William Holden rescued an elderly neighbor from her swimming pool last night, but it was too late. She died later in a hospital.

Mrs. Edith Van Dusen, 67, was found floating in the pool by a relative who summoned Holden from across the street. Holden dived in and pulled Mrs. Van Dusen from the water. Then he applied artificial respiration until the fire department squad arrived and took over.

ing outside interests before federal agencies.

From time to time when it necessary to get prominent men to come in and do a special job for the government—a man who'd otherwise be barred because of the conflict of interest law—congress has passed a special law just for them, exempting them from conflict of interest.

This was done, for example, in the case of the men called in to work with former President Hoover on reorganization of the government and again for men serving on the loyalty review board which has final say on people fired for communism from government jobs.

Members of the Nimitz commission wanted the same special law passed for them, since otherwise they couldn't make the sacrifice required to serve on the commission. The house approved a measure to clear them.

But the senate didn't act. The McCarran committee refused to go along in spite of exceptions made in the past. McCarran told reporters, "the law should be enforced for all." The Nimitz commission gave up and quit.

—Ha-ha, I know you collectors guard your finds like jewels. I have known, however, for a long time that this bird exists somewhere to the North, and there we can proceed in comfort by the Messageries Fluviales at this season of the deep waters."

Alan wondered what fantastic notion this man might have about the values of rare birds so willing to expose himself to the appalling discomforts and dangers of a monsoon season jungle. "It takes time, you know, Monsieur, to trap something so elusive that it has not been found for a hundred years. And the next steamer—"

Monsieur Benoit interrupted him. "Ah, you Americans! Always in the hurry. So you catch the next steamer. And you acquire in the meanwhile some specimens that bring much kudos to your name—the which, it seems to me as a businessman, translates to more money."

IT translated into something, all right. Alan's lips widened into a thin grin. But he wouldn't want to wet nurse this city slicker. He said: "Have you a friend, partner or some such, who could come along? I mean to keep you company if we have to go in deep on foot?"

Benoit threw out his hands in a Gallic gesture. "Alas, Monsieur! I had one whom I could of used, but he not so long ago died of one of the sicknesses that undermine a man in this climate."

Alan's breath sucked in slowly. Somebody else who presumably knew something about this bird had died. His grin went away and he said, "Okay, Monsieur. You buy the chips and I'll play."

Benoit did not understand the allusion, but everybody in the post-war world had learned the meaning of "okay." Benoit jumped up with a surprising alertness. "Splendid! I congratulate myself upon your company." He wagged a knowing finger. "I shall bring along the wines that on these steamers is execrable. And of course a personal servant who can attend upon us both."

A personal servant. That would mean two to be watched.

Thousands Swarm Berlin From East

Berlin, Aug. 6 —(UP)—Thousands of youths here for a mammoth Communist "peace" rally swarmed into the Western zone of Berlin today and gaped in awe at store windows laden with goods.

West German police and American troops were alerted for possible trouble, although the invasion appeared to be peaceful. The soldiers were confined to their barracks.

Later U. S. authorities said that since yesterday when the Eastern zone fully opened 15,000 delegates had defied Communist police patrols to visit the glittering shops of West Berlin. They said 86 of the visitors already had asked political asylum in the Western sector.

Yesterday 500,000 youths, including an eight-member American delegation carrying a United States flag, marched through East Berlin shouting attacks against the West.

Today Western authorities relaxed restrictions and let columns of the youths roam the streets of West Berlin.

Some of the delegates disguised their Communist uniforms to slip over the zonal border. Part of them commented that the display of shoes, dresses, toys and fresh fruit was something they had not seen in the controlled stores of the Communist zone.

West German authorities, seeking to lure youths away from the 15-day Communist demonstrations, gave away show tickets. Professional entertainers offered to furnish free attractions.

Meanwhile about 5,000 others, strictly loyal to their Communist leaders, marched to the Soviet war memorial in East Berlin for a wreath-laying ceremony honoring Soviet war dead.

Sparkman for Abolition of Acadmeies

Washington, Aug. 7 —(U.P.)—Sen. John J. Sparkman, D., Ala., said today that congress should "abolish" West Point and Annapolis.

He made the statement amid furious debate on Capital Hill regarding dismissal of 90 West Point cadets who violated the academy's 150-year-old honor code by cheating on exams. A senate subcommittee has ordered a "preliminary" investigation of the mass firing.

"We should abolish both academies," he told reporters. He said the armed services should draw all officers from college reserve officer training programs.

A telegram sent to President Truman last night by the parents of the 90 cadets was expected to be given to Mr. Truman today.

White House observers, noting that Mr. Truman—an artillery captain in World War I—always has tried to conduct himself as a "good soldier," predicted that he would take no action in the case without consulting military officials.

The parents asked the president to restore the cadets to duty and let them be graduated from West Point and be commissioned as officers.

Mr. Truman, who wanted to attend the academy but was disqualified by poor eyesight, has taken no action so far in the scandal. A White House spokesman said last Friday when the dismissals were announced that Mr. Truman was "naturally very much concerned," and had known in advance and approved of the army's action.

Sparkman said the two military training schools can not train more than one put of every five officers needed by the armed services. The rest come from college ROTC units, he said.

"We should dral all our officers from the ROTC programs," Sparkman said.

He added that closing West Point and Annapolis also would destroy any vestige of "cliques" in the army and navy.

Sparkman said that present facilities at West Point and Annapolis could be used for "special graduate studies, something like the war colleges." He suggested that ROTC graduates could be given a one-year training course at the academies.

Chairman Clyde R. Hoey, (D-N.C.) of the senate's permanent investigating committee said he had ordered a staff to "get the preliminary facts" on the cadet dismissals. He said this information would be needed if the senate armed services committee ordered a "full scale" investigation.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga.) turned down suggestions that the house armed services committee investigate the scandal. He said he would not ask his group to conduct an inquiry because "it is a matter for the West Point authorities and the army."

Hoey's announcement late yesterday followed a statement by Army Football Coach Earl Blaik and west Point Superintendent Maj. Gen. Frederick Irving that they would welcome a congressional investigation.

Blaik said the Army football players involved were of "excellent character," and this fact should be emphasized to the public. Cheating on exams was reported to have been started by members of the football squad.

"I am sure that when the whole story is understood," Blaik said, "no fair-minded men will condemn them."
